Ratman was a good man. He loved nature, sports and recreation. And more than all that he loved Black-Cat-Woman.

Black-Cat-Woman couldn't care less about sports, she did exercise here and there, but she appreciated nature above all. She especially loved stars...

- I've heard that out there somewhere is a lucky star.

- Hm...

3.

- Those who find it become eternally happy.

4.

- Eternally?

5.

- Oh yes.

- Thank you very much...

3.

And hundred stars they visited

- Oh, they're all so beautiful; I could stare at them for days.

- ...Yes they are all pretty as a picture.

4.

- And how will we know now which one is the lucky one?

- Hm... True...

- How could a normal person know that...

1.

- Oh, I can't take it anymore, I'll go mad from beauty

2.

- No dear... We will both go mad from beauty!

- How could we get any luckier!

Ratman and Black-Cat-Woman are still traveling the space, seeing hundred wonders, meeting many wonderful creatures, visiting different stars and finding more and more of lucky ones. Sometimes they think that all stars are lucky, they dance and shine like disco balls in a vast cosmic discotheque.
